“mawmaw was more than my grandmother. she was my motherly figure, my safe place, and one of the greatest blessings of my life.

she helped raise me and played a huge part in shaping the woman i am today. everything good in me has a piece of her in it. she was strong, spunky, and full of life in her own beautiful way.

she loved the simple things. icy pops, fishing, pawpaw, rosie, and a good pot of goulash. she found joy in moments that most people overlook, and she made those moments feel special just by being in them.

i was blessed with 28 years of memories with her. we traveled together, laughed together, and experienced so many “firsts” side by side. i got to take her to try lobster for the first time, and we shared hibachi together too. we saw skies filled with geese and made memories that will stay with me forever.

one of the moments i will hold closest to my heart happened not even a week ago. i was helping her bathe, and she let out a soft giggle and said, “this makes me wonder how many times i’ve bathed you.” in that moment, everything came full circle. the love she poured into me my entire life came right back to her.

she raised me with love, patience, and strength. and i wouldn’t have had it any other way.

mawmaw was the best woman i have ever had the honor of knowing. loving her was a blessing, and being loved by her was even greater.

i will carry her with me in everything i do. always.
