“ I first met Terry at CIP during a class I was taking over a year ago. His personality and enthusiasm reminded me of my father whom I had lost a year before. I shared this information with him because I was teary-eyed for most of the class and he was wondering if the information in which he was sharing was that awful. I explained that his resemblance to my dad's look and overall personality was unbelievable. I showed him a picture of my father and he himself couldn't believe the similarity. He then befriended me on Facebook and told me to take a picture of him, so I did, and later cried with my sister as I talked about the experience. I saw Terry a few times again at CIP after that day and he always remembered me, I followed Terry on Facebook where I learned that such a sweet man was going through some very tough times, but always stayed on the positive side of things, and once again reminded me of my father.

Sometimes in life you meet someone who makes a big impact on you and they don't realize it because they are living in their everyday normal life, but Terry's sweet nature meant something to me and for that I will never forget him. Angels are real!
